Are Joe Biden & Trump overdue?

Life expectancy in America average in 77

San Francisco Bay Area, 04.11.2023, 01:09 Time

USPA NEWS - Since 2020, there's been a broken presidential term in America, since 77-year-old Donald Trump lost the Elections.

Accdo

According to most current data from the CDC, the average American male life expectancy is near 76 years of age. Since both candidates are above average American life expectancy, let's look at the probabilities.

What happens when an American President dies?

While it's unprecedented, there are rules in place thanks to our founding fathers placed rules and strategize a way to not leave American people without government representation.

Following constitutional rules;

The vice president would become the Official President of the United States. Despite being the third in line, House Speaker Mike Johnson (REP-LA), would not be vice, that happens only in case both died, but instead, Kamala Harris would pick someone, to become Vice-President, as soon as possible.

For some, the question is, can an 80-year-old person still run? The same true is valid for Donald Trump since he is also above average life expectancy.

According to the White House website;

"The President is both the head of state and head of government of the United States of America and Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces. -

Under Article II of the Constitution, the President is responsible for the execution and enforcement of the laws created by Congress." Fifteen executive departments — each led by an appointed member of the President's Cabinet — carry out the day-to-day administration of the federal government.

- Do you think the average 80-year-old person can supervise 15 departments and command, say a military?

Do you think an everyday 80-year-old person would be able to run 15 departments at a Target store and keep track of inventory, sales, and consumer trends?

- Maybe this is a script for another story but in the end, it would be comical to try. Instead maybe like so many nations around the world, we should be questioning the logic of the complacency of the average United States citizen.

- The youngest person to become U.S. president was Theodore Roosevelt, who, at age 42, succeeded to the office after the assassination of William McKinley.

At age 42, succeeded to the office after the assassination of William McKinley. The youngest at the time of his election to the office was John F. Kennedy, who was aged 43.

Joe Biden's latest attention grabber is the topic of artificial intelligence. It may create a good sound bite or future campaign fodder, but there's nothing new about it. Many would argue that since Joe Biden became president, there's been no change to the social order, the rich get richer and the poor are mired in their own deprivation.

Let's check some numbers.

According to the latest information published by the Washington Post.

"The black-white economic divide is as wide as it was in 1968" - 14 charts show how deep the economic gap is and how little it has changed in decades. The COVID-19 "recession" is also hitting "black families and business owners far harder than whites."

For most colored families, it feels the same as a colored person living under the civil rights movement... The disparity is still the same, even with the vice president calling herself a black woman.

On the other front, Donald Trump is fighting his own mistakes and seemingly does not have the time to take care of the American ppl

It's apparent that he needs to take care of his problems first, before tackling the nation's woes.

When comparing analytics, let's look at a non-candidate in the democratic party, former first lady Michele Obama caught my attention due to her popularity. Is she fit for office, well firstly speaking she's the same age as Kamala Harris. She is tough, when necessary, she can speak for herself and is not reliant on a teleprompter. The former First Lady also appears more active and productive and has garnered more sympathy from the public than the two presumed nominees overall.

On Instagram, Michelle Obama has more followers than her husband, Former President of the United States, Barack Obama, she has more followers than Kamala Harris, more followers than Joe Biden, and even the White House. She is more than a deal; she is the CONTRACT... If you think through, today, there are an average of 133 million voters, only on Instagram, Michele Obama has 57 million of followers, almost half of the U.S. voting population.

While voter satisfaction is still in discussion due Joe and Trump's age, all the bids are going for them.
