Ban Ki Moon, The UN Secretary General said that we are moving towards a conclusion after the Paris exchanges and conversations the most complex and complicated and the most difficult negotiations he has ever known.

A DRAFT FINAL REDUCED TO 27 PAGES TO DELIVER AN HISTORIC AGREEMENT ON CLIMATIC CHANGE

The last draft agreement reduced to 27 pages, was released Thursday night, is quite widely studied and deeply tackled regarding many issues, but is still lacking some areas solutions to please everybody.------

Laurent Fabius, President of the COP21, also French Foreign Affairs Minister said "We are reaching a successful and ambition agreement" yesterday night.-----

Some issues have not been resolved yet, especially the financial and legal which are the most important part of the accord itself. The other share of each country regarding they are developed countries or not, don't seem to be satisfied by the "assessment of each country's part and share of the contributions."?

The Iraqi Minister of Environment Dr Jassim Abdulaziz Al Falahy explained at a press conference yesterday afternoon, at GCC's pavilion that "We have submitted our INDCC in last November to UNFCCC, and we would like to be considered as a country that is mostly producer of oil, depending on oil, but also endeavour the impacts of climate changes. We had to set up two weeks of vacations in Iraq because of the rise of temperatures that became unbearable to our population". Not to mention that Iraq is a territory under conflict and also impacted by climate and conflict migration, and suffers from the DAECH 's domination deviating their oil from the national vital resource.------

According to an official source, the final draft of a has been completed after late-night negotiations and translated in many languages before to be presented to participant of the negotiations outside Paris within hours.

The official text will be presented at the special meeting to be haled at at 11:30 a.m. (1030 GMT), in COP21, Le Bourget, in Plenary Room La Seine.
